

Involvement opportunity

Patient Advisory Group

Have you or someone you care for had surgery for oesophageal or stomach cancer? Would you like to help our researchers design a study?

We are looking for members of the public to join our Patient Advisory Group to help us design an important research study. The study we would like you to help us design is called the Rose Study, and aims to find out whether an online symptoms reporting and symptom management advice system can help patients recovering from surgery once they are at home.

What does it involve?

- This is an exciting opportunity to get involved in research that can make a real difference. We are keen to hear your thoughts about our study.
- Members of the group will meet together or individually with our study researcher. We will meet at several points throughout the study but you do not have to join every meeting.
- Meetings will be held virtually/electronically (by computer) or by phone, depending on your preference.
- We are able to pay the hourly public rate for involvement.

If you would like to know more, please contact our researcher Hollie Richards at Hollie.Richards@bristol.ac.uk